

I am writing to state my opposition to further "deregulation" of our nation's media. I do not believe allowing cross-ownership of different media sources serves the public interest. It encourages just the opposite, in fact, which I believe has been proven substantially by the state of our current radio, television and newspaper media due to the "deregulation" that occurred in the mid-1990's. I am also writing to express my belief that any decisions about our media sources should be debated publicly before policies are implemented. Currently it appears that the lack of public debate has allowed for a handful of companies to control most of our media sources. It's an embarrassing sham.

Sincerely,
Kevin Corstange, citizen